The illustration above shows a grand staff that is used in piano music. Music, like language, is written with symbols which represent sounds; from the most basic notation which shows the pitch, duration and timing of each note, to more detailed and subtle instructions showing expression, tone quality or timbre, and sometimes even special effects. The rhythm is where notes have different durations within the structure of the piece. Read the notes on the tab. Method 3. Instead, with practice, you will gradually learn to process notes in clumps so the first finger note on each string of the violin would look like this:
