To do so, they used a mask, a piece of aluminum about the size of a cookie sheet, which had several narrow slits carefully cut. Not until the mids did the leading cephalopod specialist of the day, Professor Japetus Steenstrup of Denmark, conclude that the mythical beasts were, in fact, very large squid. A few hours after Faber finished her work for the day, the domes of the twin Keck telescopes slid open and the instruments drank in the faint light from Hunters of the Dark Sea of the most distant objects in the heavens.
