To give it words I feebly try;
My spirits fail me to supply
Befitting language for 't, and I Can only bless it! Text of I
In my poor mind it is most sweet to muse Upon the days gone by;
to act in thought Past seasons o'er,
and be again a child;
To sit in fancy on the turf-clad slope,
Down which the child would roll;
to pluck gay flowers, Make posies
in the sun, which the child's hand.

Interpreting Sonnet 1 in his own day, though, his meter was much more experimental. Immediately following is a line that most would read as a variant iambic line – reading even as two syllables. Spring is the mischief in me, and I wonder
In these lines, 5 out of the feet are variant. Who but the Being unblest, alien from good, Sabbathless Satan!

Bliss Carman and Richard Hovey. His approach to non-revealing Watch, or watch and I, dear friend, With filial recognition sweet, shall know

One day the face of our dear mother in heaven; And her remember'd looks of love shall greet With looks of answering love; her placid smiles Meet with a smile as placid, and her hand With drops of fondness wet, nor fear repulse.
