The preparation of a catechism and the revision of the Breviary and Missal were also left to the pope. Accordingly they insist that everything proceeding from it shall be received, like an oracle, without controversy. Much more than the Second Council of Nicaea the Council fathers of Trent stressed the pedagogical purpose of Christian images. In conclusion, in response to the arguments given by ecumenical proponents First, their lofty preamble is not followed up by anything worthy of the occasion; and, secondly, as soon as they enter upon business, the very best they have is drawn from the veriest dregs of superstition.
